Learning Objective : This course enables college and university faculty to design teaching and assessment practices that foster critical thinking, conceptual understanding, and deep learning rather than surface memorisation. Faculty learn how to challenge students intellectually, develop reasoning and judgment, and support higher-order learning aligned with disciplinary standards and academic integrity.

Course Modules	Brief Course Module Descriptions
SP10001 – Understanding Critical Thinking in Higher Education	This module explores what critical thinking means across disciplines. Faculty learn to distinguish critical thinking from opinion, debate, or content recall. Discipline-specific expressions of reasoning and judgment are examined.
SP10002 – From Surface Learning to Deep Learning	Focuses on how students approach learning tasks and why surface strategies dominate in exam-driven systems. Faculty learn how teaching design influences learning depth. Cognitive engagement is prioritised over content coverage.
SP10003 – Designing Learning Tasks that Promote Thinking	Explores how assignments, problems, and projects can require analysis, synthesis, and evaluation. Faculty learn to frame tasks that demand reasoning rather than reproduction. Authentic academic challenge is emphasised.
SP10004 – Questioning, Discussion, and Intellectual Dialogue	Examines how questioning strategies and dialogue shape thinking. Faculty learn how to facilitate discussion that deepens understanding rather than drifting into unfocused conversation. Evidence-based reasoning is prioritised.
SP10005 – Teaching Application, Transfer, and Real-World Relevance	Focuses on helping students apply concepts across contexts. Faculty learn strategies to promote transfer of learning beyond the classroom. Relevance is aligned with academic rigor, not simplification.
SP10006 – Assessing Critical Thinking and Deep Understanding	Explores assessment methods that reveal reasoning, argumentation, and conceptual grasp. Faculty learn how to evaluate thinking processes, not just answers. Feedback for intellectual growth is emphasised.
