Learning Objective : This course helps primary school teachers understand how trust, connection, and respect form the foundation of effective teaching and classroom management. Teachers learn how strong relationships influence behaviour, motivation, and learning outcomes, and how to build positive relationships with all students, including those who are challenging.

| Course Modules  | Brief Course Module Descriptions  |   |   |
|---|---|---|---|
| SP2401 – Why Teacher–Student Relationships Matter           | This module explores research and classroom evidence showing the link between relationships and learning. Teachers understand how connection impacts behaviour, engagement, and academic success. The long-term influence of teachers on children’s attitudes toward learning is discussed. |   |   |
| SP2402 – Teacher Presence, Tone, and Approachability        | Focuses on how everyday behaviours such as tone of voice, body language, and availability affect relationships. Teachers learn how small interactions build trust or distance. Conscious teacher presence is emphasised.  |   |   |
| SP2403 – Respectful Discipline and Correction               | Examines how discipline practices can strengthen or damage relationships. Teachers learn correction strategies that preserve dignity and self-respect. Public shaming and harsh responses are critically examined.  |   |   |
| SP2404 – Connecting with Challenging and Withdrawn Students | Explores relational approaches for students who are disruptive, resistant, or withdrawn. Teachers learn how connection can reduce behaviour issues. Patience and consistency are emphasised.  |   |   |
| SP2405 – Fairness, Consistency, and Trust Building          | Explains why perceived fairness strongly influences student behaviour. Teachers learn how consistency and transparency build trust. Managing perceptions of favouritism is discussed.   |   |   |
| SP2406 – Long-Term Impact of Teacher–Student Relationships  | Highlights how teacher relationships shape confidence, motivation, and emotional well-being beyond school years. Teachers reflect on their role as long-term influencers. Professional responsibility is reinforced.  |   |   |
