Learning Objective : This course equips special educators, shadow teachers, and inclusion specialists with an understanding of sensory processing differences and practical strategies to support students’ sensory regulation in school environments. Participants learn how sensory sensitivities affect behaviour, attention, and learning, and how to provide appropriate support without overstimulation or stigma.

Course Modules	Brief Course Module Descriptions
SP8401 – Understanding Sensory Processing in School Contexts	This module explores how the brain processes sensory information such as sound, light, movement, touch, and proprioception. Participants learn how sensory processing differences influence classroom behaviour and engagement. A regulation-based perspective is emphasised.
SP8402 – Identifying Sensory Needs and Triggers	Focuses on recognising sensory sensitivities, seeking behaviours, and overload triggers. Participants learn how to observe patterns across settings and activities. Individual sensory profiles guide support decisions.
SP8403 – Classroom-Friendly Sensory Support Strategies	Explores practical sensory supports such as movement breaks, seating options, fidgets, and visual modifications. Participants learn how to integrate supports discreetly. Classroom inclusion and dignity are prioritised.
SP8404 – Sensory Regulation During Learning Activities	Focuses on helping students maintain regulation during lessons, transitions, and assessments. Participants learn proactive sensory strategies that support attention and participation. Prevention is emphasised over reaction.
SP8405 – Managing Sensory Overload and Meltdowns	Examines how to respond calmly to sensory overload or shutdown. Participants learn de-escalation techniques that reduce distress. Safety and emotional containment are prioritised.
SP8406 – Collaboration and Monitoring Sensory Support	Explores working with teachers, counsellors, and parents to maintain consistent sensory support. Participants learn how to document strategies and monitor effectiveness. Ethical and respectful practice is reinforced.
